AUTHOR, SPEAKER & PODCAST HOST

Helping parents raise differently wired kids in a conventional world

Debbie frequently connects with audiences through town hall and intimate "in conversation with" events for parents and educators, allowing for authentic audience engagement and building community. She also speaks to audiences on the following themes:

The "New Normal" Kids and Why We Need to Embrace Them

At least 1 in 5 children is in some way neurodivergent (ADHD, learning disabilities, autism, giftedness, anxiety, sensory issues, etc). With this number only rising, chances are that every one of us either knows one of these kids – or is raising one. Yet despite this ubiquitous population, they often struggle in schools and society. In this eye opening talk, Debbie offers anecdotes, humor, inspiration, and practical shifts to implement in dealing with neurodivergence, while bringing us all closer to the paradigm shift that will help create a brighter future for all of our kids, and for the world. How to Love Parenting the Child You Have

Nearly all parenting challenges are rooted in a disconnect between our expectations and the day-to-day reality. But when we choose to lean in to who our kids inherently are, our own personal development is sparked in fulfilling, powerful, and beautiful ways. In this talk, Debbie explores the unexpected gifts our children bring into our lives when we're willing to truly accept them, and shares ideas for how to foster our own personal growth spurts, leading to happier kids and more connected families. SOS for Parents in the Trenches

Behind every kid who is differently wired is likely to stand one or more frustrated, overwhelmed adult. Though there are millions of us around the world, we often feel completely isolated. In this practical and actionable talk, Debbie shares ten powerful "tilts," a.k.a. practical ideas to help parents shift their thinking and actions in a way that will help them feel more confidence and peaceful, create a stronger family dynamic, and give their extraordinary children what they need to thrive.
